

ISMS Councils and Committees

The Committee on CME Accreditation determines issues related to accreditation and CME sponsorship.

The Committee on CME Activities plans and approves the Society's continuing education activities.

The Council on Communications & Membership Advocacy oversees and guides ISMS' communications with physician members and non-members, and externally, on behalf of physician interests. Through effective communications and marketing, the Council promotes member recruitment and retention.

The Council on Economics considers third party payment issues, health care cost and utilization review activities.

The Council on Education and Health Workforce studies and evaluates all phases of medical education and advises on issues of physician licensure and discipline.

The Council on Governmental Affairs develops, promotes and evaluates state and federal legislation, and is responsible for political education on issues affecting physicians and their practice.

The Medical Legal Council focuses on legal developments affecting the medical profession.

The Council on Medical Service reviews issues related to the delivery of medical care and health services, including mental health and public health issues.

The Women in Medicine Committee overall goals are to: monitor key issues and policies affecting women in medicine, provide mentorship and leadership for women physicians and medical students, and to expand advocacy and education efforts for women in medicine.

Want to join an ISMS Council or Committee?

If you are interested in joining a council or committee please email ISMS' Sr. Director of Board & Annual Meeting Services, Karen Clement, at karenclement@isms.org. In the email, list the council or committee you'd like to join, or learn more about, and Karen will assist you.
